The Journal of High Threat and Austere Medicine, the official journal of the Australian Tactical Medical Association, has a readership of over 1000 ATMA members and other clinical and medical professionals.

ATMA is a not-for-profit association that represents the interests of Australians involved in the provision and development of tactical medicine across the spectrum of applications, from the general emergency services response to high threat incidents, right through to highly specialised providers in military, police and other special operations groups.

The journal complements ATMA's mission to continually improve and provide the highest level of first aid and medical care in austere, dangerous, remote and dynamic environments.
